THURSDAY EVENING, OCT. 6, 1881.

AND there was no racket at the Republican convention in New York, after all. The "stewards" and "half-breeds" met and fraternized as though they had never had any differences. Well done, brethren.

MURAT HALSTEAD, of the Cincinnati Commercial, visited President Arthur last week, and had a long conversation with him, the results of which he gives in his columns. He has evidently had some new revelations as to the probable policies of the new administration, and speaks in the kindest terms of the new president. He is of opinion that the cabinet will be materially changed between now and December. He thinks MacVeagh will be the first to go out, and will be succeeded by Benjamin H. Brewster, an eminent and clear-headed lawyer of Philadelphia. Mr. Halstead prophesies that Secretary Blaine will be sent as minister to England, and will be succeeded in the state department by Andrew D. White, late minister to Germany, or by Ex Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey. He has no doubt that Secretaries Hunt and Lincoln will remain in the cabinet, and that James will not go out until the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1882. He believes that Wadsworth and Kirkwood will soon retire. In the course of his letter Mr. Halstead takes occasion to refer in the following terms to the individual whom he has done his best to set before the public as the great bugbear of modern politics:

Ex-Senator Conkling seems to have been misjudged in the course of the local political contests that have distracted New York for so long. It is, I am persuaded, unfair to say that he refused to attend the state convention because the majority has not returned to support him through thick and thin. His friends have known, and he begins to feel, that the death of President Garfield was to him a great political misfortune. He uses this language with regard to the situation: "I can not dispute with a dead man. I can not go into a new-made grave and make war. They taunt me to do it, but I will not do it. Some things must go unanswered now. Perhaps I shall have something to say in coming years—but not yet. I shall not go to the convention, and have not intended to do so. The fight my friends are making is not for me." Perhaps this is not a verbatim report, but it is close enough to be true at all points to Mr. Conkling's definition of his position.

After softening down his normal temper in this way, he thumbs out still further, and gives President Arthur the following very neat send-off:

President Arthur is not looking well. He has the appearance of a man who has passed through great anxiety and mental suffering. There is a gleam on about him that the country does not yet give him credit for. His last parting with President Garfield, during the heat of the New York warfare, was not only cordial, but affectionate. He has been greatly grieved by the use of his name by the assassin Guiteau, and by the story of confessions at his house while Garfield was very low. The truth about the "conference" was that a few of Arthur's friends, finding him despondent, thought it wise to call upon him with the view of cheering him up, by lively conversation. This fact one of them mentioned.

After the death of Garfield, Arthur was hurried away to Washington, and left his personal affairs in confusion. He timed his trip to New York so that it might be coincident with the vacation of the cabinet, while he could avoid the state convention.

He referred to the importance that the October election here usually had and said that, under the circumstances of the country, it was especially so now. I told him it would, in my judgment, do good if he would allow me to state on his authority that he took that degree of interest in the contest in this state.

He replied that there was no objection to publishing what he said; on the contrary, it would give him great pleasure to have his words reported to the people of Ohio, if the friends of the Republican cause believed they would have the tendency to remove any doubts or uncertainties. Senator Jones, of Nevada, whom I saw after seeing the President, expressed his gratification that the President had made the expression of opinion about the Ohio election of which I informed him, and gave his own hearty concurrence to it; adding that a still more positive and formal utterance might be had if thought desirable.

President Arthur has no word of wisdom to any one. He enters upon the discharge of his great and trying responsibilities with "malice toward none and charity for all."

The Cleveland Herald of last Friday says: "According to the request of Mrs. Garfield a photograph of her late husband, the picture was yesterday shipped to her majesty by Mr. J. F. Ryer, the photographer. It is the same size as the one that hangs in the catafalque, is silver-mounted and elegantly framed. The photograph sent to the queen is contained in Mrs. Garfield's best photographic ever taken of her husband."

Mr. C. A. Smith, of Jimes, Ohio, writes: "I have used every remedy I could think of for sick headache for the past 15 years, but Carter's Little Liver Pills did me more good than all the rest. For sale by Hubbard & Swearingen."

YESTERDAY we received news of a Decatur boy's prosperity in famous Leadville, Colorado, where by hard knocks and good luck, some people, notably Ex-Gov. Routt and others, soon become millionaires. A copy of the initial number of the Mining Index, a weekly mining, milling and smelting journal, of which Mr. Alfred F. Woesch, formerly of the Decatur Review, is at hand. It is a neatly printed journal and is full of carefully prepared mining news. Its subscription price is $4 per year. The following from the Leadville Herald states "Al's" career in Leadville: "The Democrat has lost the services of Mr. Woesch as its mining reporter, that gentleman having resigned. The loss to the columns of the Democrat will be understood when it is known that Mr. Woesch is one of the most careful, painstaking editors in the city. Taking a mining department of the Democrat when he was totally unfamiliar with mines, he has by diligence and careful attention to detail, attained a high degree of skill in this branch of his profession; has always been conscientious and reliable, and has acquired the confidence of mining men in a remarkable degree. The Herald regrets the necessity for his withdrawal from the Democrat." We wish Al every possible success in his new enterprise. He has plenty of grit and is not easily discouraged in anything he undertakes to accomplish.

THE Wabash Railway company earned at the rate of $7,000 per mile on the entire present mileage during the third week in September. Allowing 65 per cent. for operating expenses, there remains net earnings at the rate of $2,450 per mile.

The bonded indebtedness is $28,000 per mile, and stock, preferred and common, is issued at the rate of about $14,000 per mile; so that it is claimed by the friends of the road that it is earning interest on its bonds and 6 per cent on its stock, both preferred and common.

THE whisky and anti-whisky war in Urbana has been decided hot for a long time, the no-license party having succeeded in closing the saloons. The saloon men are now triumphant, as on Monday night the city council passed a license ordinance, and the saloons will again open. The ordinance, however, prohibits all screens before doors, paints on the windows, all back entrances to saloons, all billiard or card tables, and all chairs for seats, and fixes the license at $500.

One of the handsomest and most tasteful displays of costly dress goods, trimming, etc., to be seen in the city, is that shown in the large window at F. L. Hays & Co.'s dry goods store. It is an exhibit that attracts the admiring attention of numerous people, and the Misses Hartie Brown and Meta Battenger, who arranged the goods as they now appear, well deserve the many compliments they have received.

GEORGE P. HARDY, Jr., has gone into business for himself, and will certainly succeed. Yesterday he purchased one of James Hart's express wagons and team and he is on deck ready to deliver goods to all parts of the city. Hang out a flag for George, and he will respond quickly.

Retired to Tennessee. The Baptist Standard of Oct. 6th, contains the following reference to a former Decatur pastor, who is a prominent member of the Masonic and Knights of Honor orders: "The resignation of Rev. W. G. Louren as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Fox Lake, Wis., was tendered on Sunday, the 18th inst. With reluctance the church yesterday voted to accept it. Mr. Inman goes to the church at Hurlock, West Tennessee."

An exchange makes the following reference to a stage celebrity who will appear at the opera house on Saturday evening in "Macbeth," supported by a strong comic opera company.

The young and attractive Miss Fay Templeton sang and acted the rôle of "Bella" with great success in the very large audience present responding warmly to her first song. She has her own ideas about the part, staging and acting in such a manner as to receive continual applause. She decided last night, and cannot fail of distinguishing success in this or other roles where excellent vocal and dramatic powers are required.

WEDDING BELLS.

Joyous Marriage of Mr. Randolph J. Simpson and Miss Anna K. Brown Last Evening.

The Presbyterian Church Filled With a Festive Throng of Friends.

THE CEREMONY:

The general topic of conversation in society circles in Decatur, and in homes in Springfield and Taylorville, during the past fortnight, was the approaching marriage of Miss Anna M. Brown, daughter of Captain and Mrs. W. J. Brown, and Mr. RANDOLPH J. SIMPSON, bookkeeper at E. D. Bartholomew & Co.'s wholesale and retail queensware store in opera block, which was solemnized last evening at 9:00 o'clock in the presence of a large and fashionably attired company of friends, who filled every available seat in the spacious room. The invitations extended numbered 500, but many who came late, were unable to enter.—

Preceding the bridal party came the parents of the bride, her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, of Cotton Hill, Ill., parents of the bridegroom, and his brother, William Simpson; J. B. Brown and D. C. Brown, of Springfield; uncles of the bride, Sister Brown, Edward Brown and Miss Bettie Brown, of Springfield, cousins of the bride, Mrs. John Mason, of Clinton, and Mrs. Dr.

Townsend, of Springfield, aunts of the bride,

the latter a sister of the bridegroom.

At the appointed moment the organ, at which Prof. Albert Condell presided,

pealed forth a beautiful wedding march,

and the bridal party entered the church,

passing up the west aisle preceded by the ushers, Mr. Frank P. Roach and Mr.

Frank Curtis, followed by the attendants,

Mr. John Y. Morrison, of Decatur,

and Miss Moline Brown, of Springfield,

cousin of the bride, and Mr. Frank Cowgill and Miss Mabel Jones, of Springfield,

who are also cousins of the bride. Last came the contracting parties, who on reaching the altar stood in front of the officiating clergyman, Rev. W. H. Presley, the bridesmaids attending at the right of the minister and the groomsmen at the left. The solemnization of the marriage was brief and impressive, and was followed by a short prayer by the minister, after which Mr. Simpson and bride left the altar passing down the east aisle followed by the attendants and ushers.

The bride was beautifully attired in a handsome dress of white muslin and white satin, trimmed with lace. The ornaments were tea roses and other natural flowers.

She wore the conventional bridal veil,

and carried a lovely bouquet of tuber-oses, tea roses and carnation pink, with silver handle, the gift of the second bridesmaid. The bridesmaids were both attired in dresses of white muslin.

The bridegroom appeared in conventional black.

The decorations were profuse, particularly about the altar, which the sacred desk was almost hidden with taste-

fully arranged growing plants, blooming

flowers and ferns.

THE RECEPTION,

which was held at the residence of the bride's parents on South Main street,

from 9 until 11, was attended only by the relatives of the bride and groom and a few

near neighbors. Warm congratulations

were tendered the happy and well-

matched couple, when the company passed

the remaining hour in inspecting the large and handsome display of beautiful and costly presents which are mostly of silverware, china, fine linen, etc.,—all useful articles—tokens of love and good wishes from hosts of friends. The more noticeable gifts were a large trunk and pearl set charm attached, in case, from the bridegroom; a beautiful Wedgewood

Summer Time brown china dinner set,

163 pieces, from E. D. Bartholomew & Co.

and a hand painted china chamber
